ENGLAND IN THE TOILS.

Look where she may, England is confronted on every side with the war-like aspect of bristling steel. The Arabs engage her troops in Egypt, the Irish menace her at home, and the Germans have recently occupied her territory in Africa, and the Russians are advancing upon the richest of her foreign possessions, India. It begins to look like a premeditated plan on the part of other nations to humble her, and, if possible, make her a third rate power. Three years ago, the Czar of Russia, the Emperor of Germany and the Emperor of Austria, met in secret conference, and it would seem as though the result of this talk had begun to manifest itself. Russia is insulting England and openly marching toward its territory with no other purpose than to provoke a war. The Sultan of Turkey stands ready to ally himself with Russia. Might it not be possible that Russia has directed the movements of the Mahdi, and us engaged England on the Sudan to keep its attention attracted while Russia falls upon her flank. Within the month Bismark has placed his foot upon points in Africa where the English flag floated but floats no longer.

But the clouds which gather about the path of England do not seem to trouble her in the least, and her abominable pluck and promptness under the trying circumstances call for the highest admiration. She is stripping for the fight, sending men and munitions to the front, forging immense guns, putting her vessels of war in fighting trim and sending her ultimatum to Russia. It is not unlikely, that before the end of all this thing is reached, the leading powers of the old world will be pitted in the field, and Europe will be convulsed with one bloodiest wars it has ever seen. America will profit immensely by this turn of affairs, and money will be plenty for the farmer whose wheat the armies will consume; and the artisan whose handiwork will be called into requisition for the destruction of human life. The fact is nevertheless to be deplored however, that the good time which will come to the United States, will be represented on the other side of the sea by blood, famine and misery.

A REMARKABLE FEAT.

The recent race between the Oxford and Cambridge crews gave an opportunity for an unprecedented feat in telegraphy. The cable dispatch giving the result of the contest, transmitted to the New York Telegram, over the Mackay-Bennett Cable Company's wire, was received just five seconds, actual time, after the finish. Two years ago, when the result of the Derby was given in New York, by the Direct Cable Company's wire, in thirty-two seconds after the foremost horse had passed the winning post, it was justly regarded as an extraordinary achievement. Yet the news of the Oxford-Cambridge race was received in less than one-sixth of the time. The improved telegraphic appliances employed by the Mackay-Bennett Cable Company enable it to do these wonderful things in the way of annihilating time and space.

The Prince of Wales went slumming in Dublin yesterday, and "freely denounced" the broken doors and general dilapidation and filth of the rookeries. He kindly said he "hoped such dwellings would soon be swept from the face of the earth." It is not reported, however, that his Royal Highness explained how the poor were to get better housing after the sweep had been made. Neither did it seem to strike him that the poverty-stricken wretches whom he was visiting would have more means to live decently if they were not taxed to support him and his army of relatives and retainers in royal luxury. Had any one present made this suggestion, the club of a loyal policeman would, doubtless, have cracked his treasonable head. The Prince is a good fellow, and more popular than the average scion of a royal house; but the Irish people will expect something more from him than mere sympathy.—Post.
